

HAWAIIAN QUEEN SERIOUSLY ILL, FRIENDS BELIEVE

Concern Manifested Over Condition of 78-Year-Old Liliuokalani.

Honolulu, Nov. 21.—The condition of Liliuokalani, the 78-years-old former Queen of Hawaii continues to cause her friends grave concern. Her illness began with a cold some time ago, and she has been weakened so by its inroads that her attendants fear she may never fully recover. Though now seen occasionally in her carriage, she is easily exhausted and often falls to sleep along the drive.

Possessed of no more actual sovereignty now than the meaneast Hawaiian stevedore, she is still accorded all the deference of royalty. On state occasions at her own home she is accompanied by ladies in waiting who wave peacock fans over her, while kahili bearers stand motionless at her side holding the royal kahili—feather-topped standards. No person is permitted to pass behind "Her Majesty" nor must the shadow of any human being fall upon her.

In the years immediately following the overthrow of her monarchy, Queen Liliuokalani struggled bitterly against the fate that had befallen her. Her attitude toward Americans was hostile. But age has healed these wounds and today her constant advice to her people is that they be loyal to the country that has adopted them.

The former Queen has in recent years occupied herself largely with literary labors. She is the author of both the words and music of "Aloha Oe," the Hawaiian song that is now well-known in the United States. She wrote it as a farewell tribute to her brother, King Kalanikouale, and it is a matter of grief to her that the song is being syncretized and played irreverently as dance music on the mainland.

Most recently Liliuokalani has been assisting the Rev. Henry Parker, a native minister, in compiling a dictionary of the Hawaiian language, for which an appropriation was made by the territorial legislature. They already have compiled about 15,000 words, several thousand of which Liliuokalani has defined in English and Hawaiian, with all the finer shades of meaning and accentuation. The difficulty of the work is that many Hawaiian words have a dozen different meanings, depend upon their juxtaposition to other words and upon gestures and inflections.

U-BOAT SAILS FOR BREMEN

crew drowned. The Deutschland was forced to put back into New London.

Suits against the owners of the craft followed and the boat was libelled. The actions, however, did not necessitate keeping the submarine in American waters.

The nose of the Deutschland was damaged in the collision. For the last few days divers and others have been at work repairing the damage. The accident was the second the Deutschland has experienced. In leaving Bremen on her last voyage to this country she ran into another craft and had to put back for repairs.

The Deutschland started from the state pier in East New London. The impression that the submarine would leave this afternoon had spread around the city and there was a large crowd of people on the pier when she began to move. The boat backed out from her berth, clearing the end of the pier about 2:23 and after going about 400 feet swung around toward Groton shore and pointed her bow down the harbor.

The boat was flying her flags and the crew were all on deck, taking a farewell look at the city as she passed down the harbor. One of the Scott company's tugs was at the pier when the Deutschland started but the undersize craft had no need of assistance. The tug followed her down the river.

"Greater Rumania" Changed By Enemy to "Poor Rumania"

Fogaras, Transylvania, Nov. 21.—The legend "Rumania Mare" and paper ribbons in the Rumanian national colors, blue, yellow and red, are the only signs left in this region today which speak of occupancy by the First and Second Rumanian armies, though many a wrecked or burned house gives evidence of the recent passing of some hostile force. "Rumania Mare" Greater Rumania—has been painted above the doors of nearly all houses in which some Rumanian official had his headquarters. Those who caused them to be placed are gone, and the Central Powers' troops, by transposing the letter "m" have changed the legend to "Arme Rumania"—Poor Rumania. The paper ribbons still hang in the autumn-leaved trees.

Mystery in Disappearance of Mrs. Harriman's Jewels, Worth $65,000

MRS. E. H. HARRIMAN

It was learned that detectives working to solve the mystery of the missing gems, valued at $65,000, lost or stolen from the home of Mrs. E. H. Harriman, widow of the millionaire railroad man, were not seeking so much the recovery of the jewels at present as to attempt to determine first when and where the robbery or loss occurred. It is not known whether the case in which the jewels had lain was emptied of its contents in the Harriman home, Fifth avenue and Sixty-ninth street, New York city, or at the trust company where Mrs. Harriman has a vault.

Here is the description of the jewelry which was sent to the principal cities of the country: Two oval shaped rubies, one oval shaped diamond, estimated at $4 to $10 carats. Each is cut in platinum and they are attached to a chain one-fourth to one-half inch long between each pendant, each chain containing five or six small diamonds.

AIR PILOTS WITH U. S. EXPEDITION MEETING PERILS

One Flyer With Troops In Mexico Falls 4,000 Feet Without Injury.

Field Headquarters American Punitive Expedition in Mexico, Nov. 21.—"Get there and back," is the motto of the punitive expedition's aero squadron. Censorship restrictions have placed an almost impenetrable hedge about the army aviator, but it may be said the squadron has lived up to its motto.

Flights are not begun at sea level, where the propeller blades can grip the air, but at a height of 5,200 to 7,000 feet, where the atmosphere is thin. The mountains, canons and sun-baked plains plus the altitude, combine to produce air currents and pockets that are a constant source of peril.

In one case a pilot went through that nightmare of all aviators, a spiral nose dive. The machine was flying at an altitude of 5,000 feet, which is more than 10,000 above sea level, when it struck an air pocket. Clouds obscured the pilot's vision and he had no idea where he was. When he realized that manipulation of his controls produced no effect, he glanced at his compass. It was turned sideways, indicating that his plane was falling with its wings at right angles to the earth. Carefully he reversed his controls, fearing that too-quick a reverse would crumple the planes. Several times he did that. At last he felt them take hold.

Just then, the clouds thinned and he saw the earth not more than 500 feet beneath him. He had fallen like a plummet at least 4,000 feet. Another pilot at an altitude of several thousand feet early one morning noticed a sheet of flame shoot from the hood of his machine. Startled, he began to veer down, seeking a place to land. He throttled down the motor and the flame receded. When he gave the engine gas a few moments later to regain momentum, the flame reappeared. Several times this occurred. Finally, he glided to earth and got out to inspect the aeroplane. Everything seemed in good shape. There were no signs of fire. The flame he had seen had been the rays of the early morning sun gleaming on the highly polished, red blades of his propeller.

The sub-treasury transferred $1,000,000 to San Francisco.

The United States Supreme Court recessed until Dec. 4.

Henry Clark, a Scotchman, was killed at Jimenez by Villista bandits.

The Cunard line steamship Carmania arrived at New York from Liverpool.

Shipments of fresh cured meats from Chicago last week totaled 47,559,000 pounds.

Weird Music From a Mine.
I recall an interesting experience at the Nueva Luz shaft, the deepest shaft on the Veta Madre, in the Guanajuato district, Mexico. It is 2,031 feet deep, cut out of solid rock. Iron buckets, guided by wire ropes, are used for hoisting men, rock and supplies, and even an experienced engineer is excited by a feeling of fear and trepidation when straddling the bale over this yawning hole.

The almost nude natives, oblivious of danger, jumped aboard, holding their torch of candles in the free hand, and as they were lowered began to sing. A flood of melody filled the shaft, a full crescendo reverberated from wall to wall, followed by softer cadences, and as I peered down into the hole the bucket continued its slow descent, the lights of the torches became more and more indistinct, the darkness deepened, and the prayerful song came up with decreasing volume until it seemed like a distant echo from the unknown. Then there was no light visible, no anthem audible, and I involuntarily said "Amen."

—Frank H. Probert in National Geographic Magazine.

The Bargain Pin.
Some years ago, when Holbrook Blinn, the actor, was playing in a London production, he went to Ascot for the races one afternoon. In an interval between races Blinn was in a refreshment booth when a stinky individual addressed him and wanted to know whether Blinn wouldn't buy a handsome diamond scarf in a great bargain. Blinn said "No," but the stranger was persistent. "It's worth $20 if it's worth a tanner," said the furtive one, "and you can 'ave it for five, guv'nor. Just take a look at it, may I?"

"Well, show it to me, then," said Blinn. "Where is it?"

Thomas Hôte one day in 1612 was hunting. He invited his comrades home with him to dinner, and as he rode along he made a heavy bet on his cook's punctuality. But the cook failed him for once. When he got home dinner was not ready. The jeers of his companions at this failure, together with his huge loss in the matter of the wager, enraged him so that he ran into the kitchen, seized a cleaver and split the cook's head open with it. Afterward his family, to keep this crime alive, adopted for its crest the bloody hand of the cook killer.

Dickens and His Wife.
Commenting on the unhappy relations between Dickens and his wife, Goldwin Smith wrote in one of his last papers: "It was a common case. Dickens had married at a low level, and his wife had not risen with him; otherwise there was no fault on her side. The matrimonial history of writers of books of imagination has often been unhappy. Their imagination turns the woman into an angel, and then they find that she is a woman."
